Winter Season Activities at the British Colonial Hotel NASSAU

CHE CONTINUING PROGRAM for renovating and refurbishing the British Colonial Hotel in Nassau, Bahamas has seen another chapter added and the hotel is gayer and brighter inside and out.

New brilliance beckons to the Continental Room where handsome antique candelabra are posed against newly mirrored walls that recreate in happy reflection the passing scene. Nightly, dancers acclaim the beautiful music of Eric Langer and his orchestra playing their tenth year in the British Colonial. The Flamingo Lounge has been given a colorful new decor highlighted by flamingo pink banquets the full length of the room. Again this season the musical background in this lounge is created by Herb and Elena Ayers with accordion and violin and Will Northcott at the organ and vibrachord. The second bedroom floor has had its turn at redecoration and corridors welcome in the glow of oleander rose doorways giving into rooms done in fresh new color combinations.

The hotel's extensive grounds have come in for their share of this sprucing-up program, with new planting of brilliant native flowers and shrubs, new walks, new parking space. Garden tables and chairs are sheltered under new umbrellas splashing more and more color on the sunny scene. The famous garden buffet luncheon is now set up on a new terrazza patio under the palms which, floodlit at night, invites dancers from the Continental Room to waltz under the stars in sight and sound of the sea.

The British Colonial opened several weeks earlier than usual this Winter to facilitate the visit to Nassau of the crowds that came to attend and take part in the first international auto racing in the Bahamas, sponsored by the newly organized Bahamas Automobile Club of which Sir Sydney Oakes is President. Prize giving after the event took place at a banquet held in the British Colonial.

tinental Room marked the opening of the Winter social season in the Colony, which reaches its height in mid-February with the Headdress Ball in aid of the Bahamas Humane Society. Also held in the Continental Room annually is the I.O.D.E. (Imperial Order Daughters of the British Empire) ball, a gay St. Patrick's party. On such special occasions, in addition to their regular Wednesday and Saturday night performances and their Friday night Champagne Hour, the internationally known exhibition dancers Peggy and Michael Arnaud entertain with great charm in their own originations. Every Monday night is like another New Year's Eve—when the Ingres Nassau Line's SS Nassau is in port. The Continental Room is dressed to the hilt with balloons, party favors, hats and noisemakers for guests who make up large parties for this gala. The Continental Room floorshow changes weekly with stars of stage, screen, radio, TV and supper clubs entertaining. Prelude to an evening's dinner and dancing in the Continental Room—cocktails in the Chanticleer Lounge where Joe LeClaire with his banjo circulates among the tables and sings everybody's favorites.

With the compliments of the British Colonial to its guests, Mondays and Fridays are Art Class days again this year. Groups of experienced and would-be artists are directed by the artist-sculptor Vuk Vuchinich, retained by the hotel. Mondays and Thursdays see the children "on toe" in the Continental Room as Dorothy Kernochnan, returning here annually from the Metropolitan Opera Ballet School in New York City, conducts the British Colonial Ballet School. Adults learn or brush up on ballroom dancing at the Peggy and Michael Arnaud Studio on the Solarium Floor a-top the hotel.

The fit's the thing!

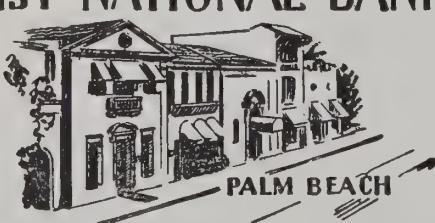

A Will—like a hat—isn't of much use unless it fits perfectly . . . and that calls for a plan.

The purpose of estate planning is to see that a person's Will does "fit," and in every detail—to organize his assets so they can meet the special needs, the individual problems, of the people he cares for, and thus furnish the utmost in comfort and security.

They might do this without planning? . . . Only by good luck. Let us work with you and your lawyer, to make sure that your family's comfort and security are not left to luck!

VEN IN EXILE, ROYAL ROMANCES FLOURISH. The marriage of Maria-Pia, eldest daughter of the royal house of Italy, to Prince Alexander of Yugoslavia, took place February 12 on the foreign but friendly soil of Portugal. Traditionally hospitable to exiled royalty, Portugal has been the home of the bride's father, King Umberto, since Italy became a republic nine years ago.

This wedding is an especially happy reunion for the royal "cousins" of Europe; besides the love match of the young people it celebrates two reconciliations, and is a triumph for those warm-hearted fixer-uppers, Paul and Frederika of Greece, who had romance as well as tourism in mind when they staged their "cousins' cruise" aboard the Greek ship Agamemnon last Summer. What they hoped for when they invited the estranged King and Queen of Italy to join the party, happened. Umberto and Marie-Jose, separated since the war, became reconciled on the cruise and resumed married life. Then Maria-Pia, the most beautiful princess on the Agamemnon, became engaged to her fellow-tourist, Prince Alexander, cousin of England's Queen Elizabeth and great-grandson of Queen Victoria.

With reconciliations in the air, Alexander's brother

DORIS

Four-year-old Prince Henri-Melchoir de Polignac was his sister Diane's only attendant when she became the Countess Roland de Chambure at the most fashionable Paris wedding of the Winter. The little Prince takes his name from a 17th century cardinal of France.

DORYS

Father of the bride, and Knight of Malta, Prince Guy de Polignac, conducts his eldest daughter, Princess Diane, to the sacristy where she will receive, for the first time, as the Countess Roland de Chambure.

Peter, ex-King of Yugoslavia, and his young Princess Alexandria, found happiness together in the snows of Gstaad at Christmas, and asked the French court to cancel their pending application for a divorce. Happily for them, it takes forever to get a decree in France; it is said that a good lawyer can stave off an unwanted divorce for nine years.

Beside being a beauty with a sense of fashion, Maria-Pia is an Oxford graduate, quite a combination for a royal princess. On the Agamemnon, she and her cousin, Maria Luisa of Bulgaria, were regarded as the girls most likely to find romance among the isles of Greece.

These royal get-togethers are usually more fun than they sound on the court calendar. Juliana and Bernhard of the Netherlands are "Lula" and "Benno", Paul and Frederika are "Paulo" and "Boubou." But Queen Elizabeth II is definitely NOT "Sausage"—especially to the Duke of Edinburgh.

With their yacht Gaviota IV already on the Atlantic, bound for Caribbean waters, the Arturo Lopez-Willshaws have only to board a plane at Orly Field to catch up with it. They fly to New York, then to Havana where they collect friends and board the Gaviota for a six weeks' cruise, anchoring at Nassau, Jamaica and the Virgin Islands. Then back to Paris for that first magic day of Spring, when the trees around their Neuilly house start to turn pale green.

One of the best-dressed women of Paris, Madame Lopez-Willshaw was the chic Queen of the Swans at the recent Bal d'Hiver.

Dressing the most fashionable Paris wedding of the winter has been pleasure as well as business for Countess Jean de Polignac. The bride, Princess Diane de Polignac, is her niece. The daughter of the late Jeanne Lanvin, Countess de Polignac has, for the past nine years, headed the fashion house founded by her mother.

Ivan the Terrible welcomed this spirited visitor to his court at the Bal d'Hiver. In the guise of Prince Youssoupoff, and literally in a costume he might have worn, Princess Troubetzkoi came to court in this 15th century costume, loaned by her friend, Prince Felix Youssoupoff. Jacques Heim fitted it to her, and added the fur. The Damascene boots, of red and green leather, go with it.

Boucher, the French painter, pictured "Winter" as a lovely lady in a sleigh. At the Bal d'Hiver, the lovely lady was Madame Raoul Mallard, gowned by Maggy Rouff in white velvet and mink. matic history and inscrutable people, all combine to fascinate the French; they still talk about the great comprehensive art show which brought Mexico, past and present, to Paris two years ago.

From Paris, but not par avion, the Ernest Grunsfelds were headed for Palm Beach, to have Valentine's Day with Ernest's mother, Mrs. Grunsfeld, Sr. The Liberte took them to New York, to begin a round of family visits that takes in Philadelphia, Chicago and Savannah, Ga., as well as Palm Beach.

Then home to Paris. Besides hurrying back to catch the first chestnut blossoms, they are the busiest people in town, putting final touches on their new apartment in the Saint-Germain sector.

To their many French friends, this apartment is a conversation piece. A Paris apartment without armoires or crystal chandeliers, with blonde wood and stainless steel, with one wall of fishnet (lower half of books), a shining electric kitchen that seems to run itself, and quel chauffage central! It is the only apartment in Paris where guests can part with their warm wraps without reluctance.

favorite 5 as the date on which to launch her 1955 collection, the largest and most ambitious she has done since coming out of retirement, an emergence described by Cocteau as "the marvelous little head of a black swan . . . advancing over the marshes."

This is the hectic season in all the fashion houses, but around Lanvin's it was doubly so — Countess Jean de Polignac, head of the house, launched a mid-Winter bride as well as a collection. Besides the bridal gown for her niece, Princess Diane de Polignac, she was responsible for the wedding velvets of the two mothers, Princess Guy de Polignac and Countess Chambure, not to mention the number of Lanvin dresses in the audience.

Around Jacques Fath's house it's been very much chin up since his untimely passing. His beautiful widow decided, on the way to the funeral, to proceed with the fashion business. The entire house blossomed in a white Christmas that was truly lovely — white reindeer with diamond necklaces rampant in the frosted windows and on the snow-powdered stairs.

The new collection evoked so much interest it was shown twice on the first day.

International Light Tackle Sailfish Tournament

LHE OCEAN CITY LIGHT TACKLE FISHING CLUB of Maryland topped a field of 30 competing teams in the 10th Annual International Light Tackle Sailfish Tournament, held off the Palm Beaches last month.

Individual honors went to Jim O'Donnell, Chevy Chase, Md., a member of the winning team, with eight of the billed game fish to his credit. Second was George Beckwith, III, of Delray Beach, with seven sails caught.

In the team division, second place went to the Walker Cay Club, with the Sailfish Conservation Club of Florida, in third.

The game fish proved to be elusive the first two days of the three-day event, but in the final day found a near record 154 sailfish boated by the anglers. Strikes for the day totaled 350.

More than 90 anglers, including many Palm Beach residents, and internationally famous sportsmen participated in the deep sea affair. The group included anglers from a dozen states, plus teams from Cuba, Puerto Rico, Mexico and Panama, giving the event an international flavor.

New Jersey and California were the leading representatives with more than ten anglers in the competition. Clubs from New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland and the District of Columbia were next with a half-dozen or more entered. Altogether 30 fishing clubs—mostly manned by three-men—competed in the event off the Palm Beach shores.

The event was originally slated for the Panama area last August, but was cancelled. In order to maintain the continuity of the event, the West Palm Beach Fishing Club, the Palm Beach Sailfish Yacht and Beach Club and the Sailfish Conservation Club of the Palm Beaches volunteered to stage the affair.

The tourney has seen its entry list almost triple since its beginning in 1946, when the Sailfish and Tarpon Club of Mexico sponsored the first competition at Acapulco, Mexico. The second tournament, which was also held at Acapulco, saw the number of clubs participating jump from four to eight. The third meeting—it had now become an annual affair—was held in 1949 at the Las Perlas Islands off the Canal Zone.

Twenty-four teams entered the 1948 tournament at Miami, and 22 the following year at Acapulco.

The Palm Beaches were hosts to the sixth contest, with an all-time high of 34 teams participating. The West Palm Beach Fishing Club won that affair and repeated at Acapulco, the following year. The Mexican fishing center was again host for the eighth tournament, with last year's contest returning to the Palm Beaches.

Ted Williams, the Boston Red Sox star outfielder captured top individual honors last season, along with the team he headed. This year, Williams, an ardent angler captained the Eastern Airlines' Flying Fisherman Club. On the team were Gar Wood, Jr., Miami Beach; and Gulian T. Crandall, Ashaway, R. I.

The first two days of the competition were limited to the male anglers, who after skipping Thursday for the women to compete, finished off the tourney on Friday, January 14.

The women's section of the tourney, a committee headed by Mrs. Kay Rybovich was in charge of their part of the event. Serving on the committee also was Mrs. Mary Lou Ferguson, Mrs. Virginia Sherwood, Mrs. Denny Crownshield and Mrs. Isabelle Sage.

All members of the committee participated along with Mrs. Jacqueline Gerli, Miss Jenette Owings, Miss Lou Lorie, Miss Dotie Whitlock, Miss Ann Till, Mrs. Gar Wood, Jr., Miss Ann Lontz, Miss Frances Greene and Mrs. Maude Cosgrove.

On a recent trip to Italy we discovered in Florence two sculptors, working in collaboration, who are turning out figurines that will rank with the finest produced anywhere. Each piece is a creation of pure genius, exquisitely modeled and strikingly beautiful, destined to become collector's pieces in years hence. Professor Bandini and Urbano Zaccagnini have modeled these entirely by hand and artistically hand painted them. Each piece bears the signature of the artist and all are originals. Limited selection of each subject. Two are pictured above. Come in and see these artistic masterpieces.

Tony Biddle's Wife visits Palm Beach

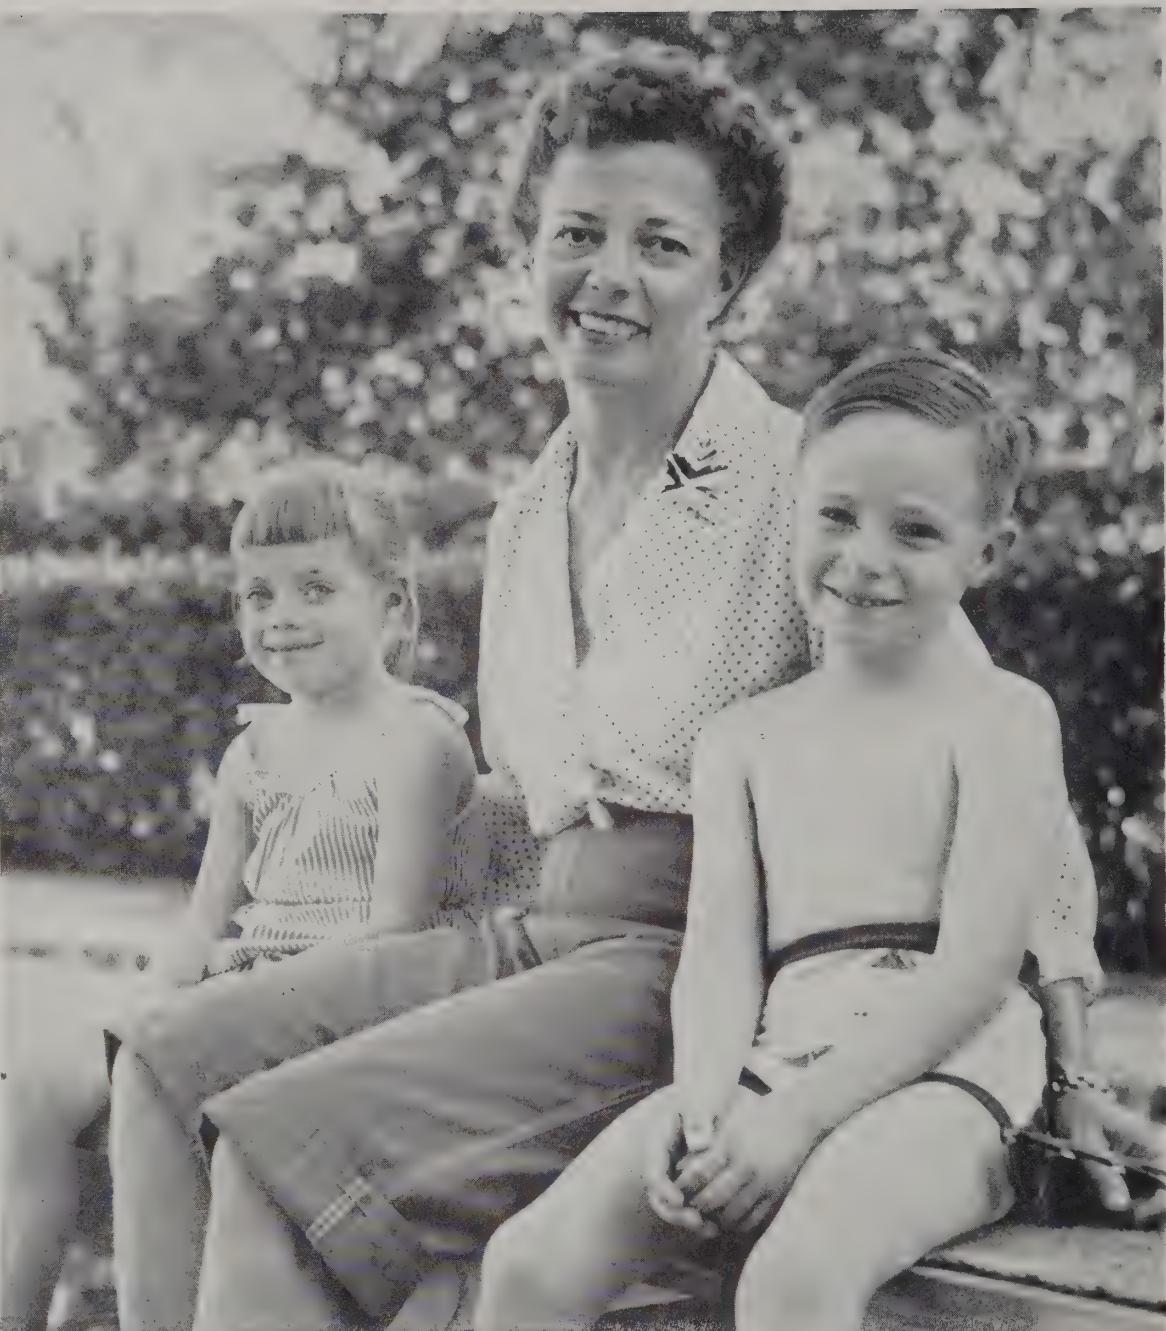

IF DURING WORLD WAR II she'd been able to achieve her ambition of joining the WACS or the WAVES, in all likelihood today she wouldn't be Mrs. Anthony Drexel J. Biddle, wife of one of this country's diplomatic and military well-knowns who also has the distinction of being an almost legendary figure of boomtime Palm Beach.

It was in the course of a recent Palm Beach visit, her first stay of any length in the resort, that Mrs. Biddle revealed the trend of events that led to her meeting and marriage with charming Tony Biddle. She confesses it frightens her to think how near she came to missing the happiness of the past ten years.

The former Margaret Atkinson was Canadian born, and though she was working and living in Chicago at the outbreak of war, she found she wasn't eligible to join one of this country's service groups for women. Determined to get into the conflict in some fashion, she kept on pulling strings, filling out applications. Finally she landed in UNRRA with the first applicants. This led eventually to an assignment with G-5 at SHAEF, while the war was going on, and SHAPE after the fighting stopped.

And because her pathway led to Supreme Headquarters instead of to some remote military post, she met General Biddle in December 1945; they were married overseas in July 1946, and she remained in Europe with her husband until they came home in 1948. She didn't want to risk any danger of mix-up about the nationality of her children so came back to have first Tony, Jr., now aged six, and then Meg, aged four.

Two and a half years with General Matthew T. Ridgway in Europe followed, and more recently her husband has been special assistant to this Chief of Army of the Joint Staffs in Washington. Last winter, she accompanied her husband when he came down with General Ridgway for the latter's speech at the Society of the Four Arts. It was Tony Biddle's first return to Palm Beach since the boom days when he had a hand in everything from the organization of the Bath and Tennis Club to running the old Montmarie Club, where Flo Ziegfeld presented his "Palm Beach Nights." He got a real kick out of showing his wife all the old landmarks, and he had anticipated a much longer vacation and a real Florida visit this winter.

Events in Washington became so hectic with the Far East situation simmering away that General Biddle had to stick to the Pentagon. So his wife picked up their two children and came on down for a couple of weeks of sunshine and relaxation at the ocean front villa of Former Ambassador to Norway Charles Ulrick Bay and Mrs. Bay. The Bays had to be in New York, but the house was open for guests. The two younger Bay children were there as playmates for Tony and Meg. Swim suits and play clothes were the order of the day. There were plenty of friends in Palm Beach.

The one real flaw to the Florida vacation was the absence of her husband.

"The four of us have such fun together," Mrs. Biddle remarked. "I'm so thrilled that before long we're going to have our very first real home in all the years we've been married."

It apparently matters little to Mrs. Biddle that the home is going to be in an isolated spot known as Indian Town Gap, at least 12 miles from Harrisburg, Pa. For after years of wandering over the face of Europe, as military officer and ambassador, General Biddle is going home, if not to Philadelphia at least to Pennsylvania. He has been appointed Adjutant General of the State of Pennsylvania by the newly elected Governor, and just as soon as he can be released from his present duties, he's going to assume these new ones.

"As long as we're together, I don't care if there is no neighbor for miles from the house where we'll live," Mrs. Biddle said with a smile. Back in Fort Myers, Va., where the Biddles live while he's stationed in Washington, she's busily preparing for the move into their first real home. Apparently the gay, cosmopolite Tony Biddle feels as she does. It doesn't look as though he'll be able to renew acquaintance with Palm Beach again for some time.

THE Colony HOTEL

ENJOYING ONE OF THE BEST SEASONS in its history, the peak of the season finds The Colony booked to capacity, according to Bernard Cooley, president and general manager. With the "hallmark" of gracious hospitality, the atmosphere of The Colony is more like that of a private club rather than a hotel. The luxurious penthouses atop the hostelry are analogous to your own chalet by the sea.

In close proximity to just about everything of importance in the resort, The Colony is very strategically located. It is around the corner from Worth Avenue, the famous shopping district; in the ocean block; near the Everglades Club golf course and tennis clubs and smart beach clubs.

The terrace room of The Colony has become the popular choice of Palm Beachers for entertaining at private luncheons and dinners. Like the other public rooms of the hotel, the decorations here are built around clover wall murals depicting scenes of the beginnings of Palm Beach.

The hotel roster reads like a veritable Who's Who in the social whirl, industry, business and professions. Among guests now at The Colony or who have spent Winter holidays there recently Rev. Bennett Applegate and Bishop Ready of Columbus, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Gene Howard, Augusta, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Birrell, New Hope, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Bamford, Schuylkill Haven, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Perkins Bailey, New York; Dr. John F. Pick, plastic surgeon of Chicago; Mrs. E. P. Cassell, Providence, R. I., and her daughter, Mrs. W. P. Taylor, and children of Germantown, Tenn.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvan Fuller of Boston; Mr. and Mrs. Albert A. Garhwaite, Manchester, Vt.; Mrs. George Hodges, Columbus, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Peter Krueger, Highland Park, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. Willis Hartman, Wichita, Kan. He is a noted polo player and brought down a string of ponies for the polo season at Gulf Stream; Rear Admiral R. P. Kauffmann, St. Louis, Mo.; Miss Julia McCarthy, society editor of the New York Daily News; Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Page, Keene, N. H.; Mrs. Jesse L. Livermore, New York City.

Other Colony guests here for seasonal sojourns or Winter holidays: Mr. and Mrs. Louis S. Wertz, Shaker Heights, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Stillman, Wellesley, Mass.; Mrs. J. David Stern and Mr. Jonathan Stern, New York, and Mrs. David Stern, New Orleans, La.; Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Here is the second floor bar of La Coquille, a cool and comfortable meeting place where a remarkable view is obtained of the ocean on the east. An exceptional sight also is gained of the remarkable pool arrangement in front of the building from this room.

The grace and symmetry of the palaces of Ancient Greece . . .

TWO YEARS AGO a traveler could drive down Florida's A1A and take in miles of scrub country and swampland. Ocean frontage can be eye catching and fascinating and people often dream of the possibilities such property offers. Robert Bissett, prominent Palm Beach resident and real estate developer, joined his talents with those of Spelman Prentice, grandson of the late John D. Rockefeller. Together they combined their foresight and good taste with stone, mortar and wood to create La Coquille on the shores of Florida's Gold Coast.

La Coquille (French for sea-shell) is situated between the ocean and Lake Worth just seven miles south of Palm Beach at Manalapan. It is chartered as a private club-resort and is a vacation paradise of exceptional tropical beauty where informality, comfort, and privacy are the rule.

The Vanderbilts, Fords, Whitneys, Rockefellers, and McCormacks have all been guests, as well as Eleanor Holm, Sloan Simpson, Conrad Hilton, Ginger Rogers, Esther Williams, Sonja Henie and numerous others.

In spite of the luxurious informality of La Coquille, the industrial tycoons and financiers from all parts of the country flock here to eat hamburgers around the pool in elegant simplicity or to dine in the beautiful Corvette Room, which offers the very finest cuisine in South Florida.

La Coquille has 1000 feet of ocean frontage, so the guests have a choice of ocean swimming or the use of a magnificent shell-shaped pool. Adjacent to this is a children's pool. Recreational facilities offered to the guests include four tournament quality tennis courts, an 18-hole putting green, a playground for the children, motion pictures, television, dark room for photo enthusiasts, four nearby golf courses, and the Delray Beach and Gulfstream polo fields.

Modern elegance and decor to please the most fastidious . . .

The main building is a smart modern structure of cypress and cement designed in a saw-tooth V-shape effect which permits each of the apartments an ocean view and advantage of breezes. Each apartment consists of living room, bedroom, kitchenette, and two baths. All rooms face the ocean, all with picture windows and most with terraces and porches overlooking the pool and beach.

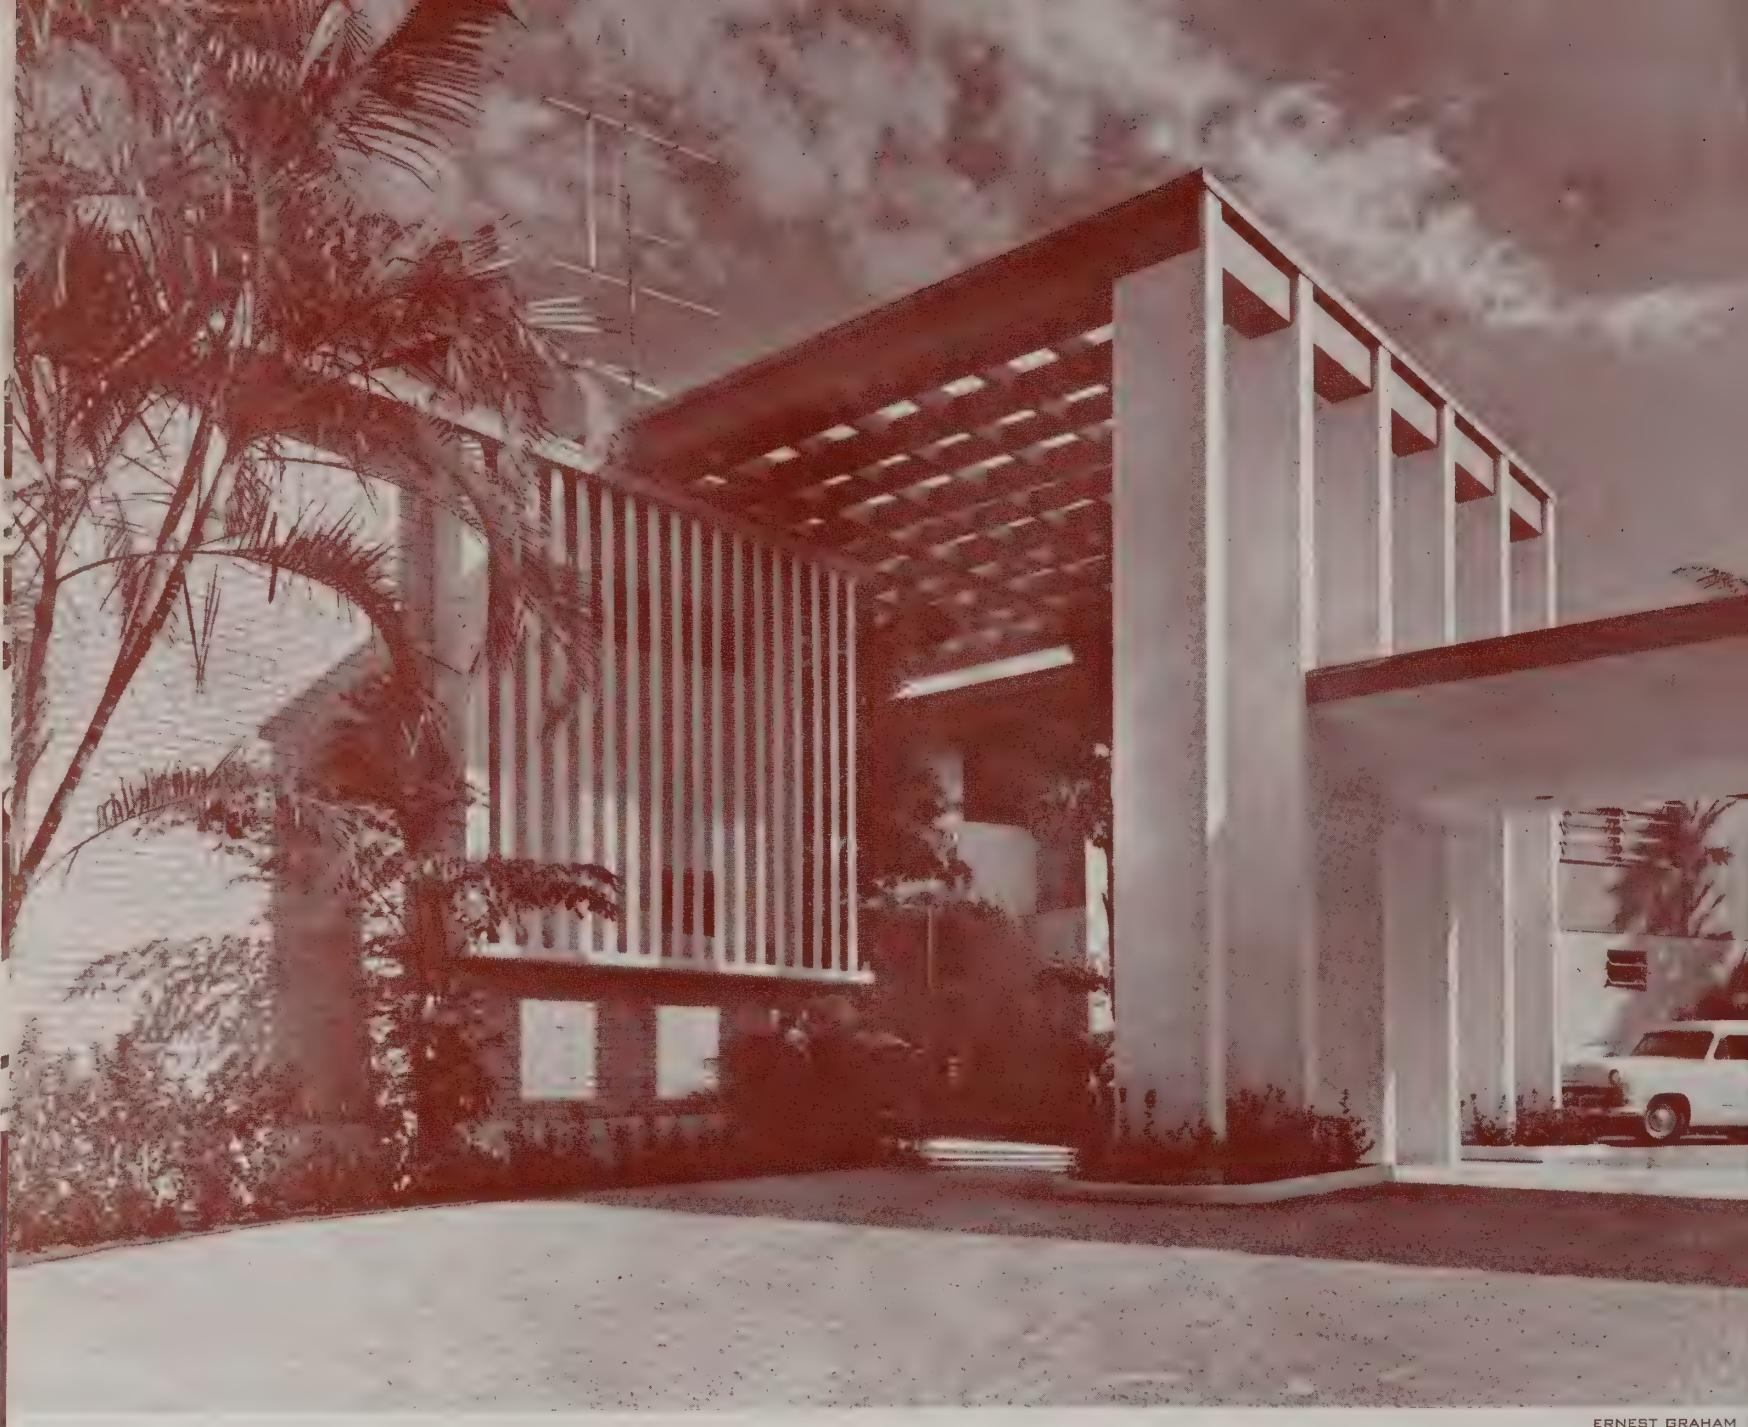

Architect Byron Simonson joined a tremendous structure to the north wing of the "V." The exterior pattern follows that of the main building while the interior of this new structure is entirely different from the interior of the apartments.

Since the apartments are ultra modern and consist of three basic color schemes of charcoal, Dresden blue and green, and almond beige, interior decorator Virginia

This is Palm Beach's newest . . . most famous resort . . . La Coquille

Johnson chose the blues and greens of the sea to set off the beautiful Ocean Room. This handsome room is done in rich woods. The floors are inlaid four foot squares of alternate black walnut and maple while the massive columns and beams of California redwood look quite beautiful against the cork walls, which are pewter paneled.

This building has locker rooms, steam rooms, beauty parlor, bar, soda fountain, coffee shop and a smart beach apparel shop.

So it is quite obvious that this fashionable tropical paradise speaks for itself, and is also positive proof of what man can accomplish towards making a dream come true.

For just one year after La Coquille opened, travelers now drive down A1A and look with awe and amazement at this fabulous place that was once five acres of former swamp land.

C. BOSSERON CHAMBERS...Traditionalist

He Gave World "Light of the World"

A corner of Mr. Chambers' Chinese bedroom in his apartment on South County Road, a room that serves as a repository for his collection of Chinese art objects.

All Photos by Lee Brian

MODERNISTS CAN PAINT ANYWHERE, but artists for whom flesh tones are all important must have ideal working conditions.

Thus does C. Bosseron Chambers explain why he doesn't work during his winters in Palm Beach, does all his painting at his studio apartment at 44 West 77th Street in New York. Anyone familiar with the Chambers portraits and religious paintings for which he is especially noted will understand his emphasis on the importance of proper lighting. When he was very young, he was carefully schooled in the old tradition by such teachers as Louis Schultz. He has never wavered in his convictions that beauty and fidelity are all important, that an artist should attempt to capture on canvas not only a good likeness, but the spirit of the person he is painting.

Florida he has found does not provide ideal working conditions. The sun is too harsh. Sun-tanned faces do not lend themselves to reproduction to a man who loves to capture the most delicate, translucent tones in his paintings. When he was a very young bachelor, for a time he had a studio on the upper floor of the old frame building that was once a yacht club, ended as the first library in West Palm Beach, and was eventually blown down in a hurricane.

C. Bosseron Chambers, noted artist, in his Palm Beach apartment with a framed print of his painting "Light of the World," believed to be the most reproduced contemporary painting.

An interesting photographic study of Mr. Chambers' colorful Chinese bedroom in which the mirror catches the reflection of the artist in another part of the room.

LEE BRIAN

"The Introduction," latest addition to the long line of C. Bosseron Chambers religious paintings, still in his Palm Beach apartment. In the soft translucent tones for which oil paintings are famed, it depicts St. Joseph presenting a neighbor child to the Infant Jesus and the Virgin Mary.

The studio, he admits, was more a pleasant gathering place for his friends than for serious work. At times he shared it with his friend, Charles Jefferson, son of the famed actor Joseph Jefferson, one of this community's best known early residents. Both Jeffersons liked to paint, he recalls. Joe would set up an easel in the observation car when on tour; Charlie achieved beautiful effects though he painted without training.

When Mr. Chambers settled down as a married man and serious artist, he forsook the Palm Beaches for many years, established his New York studio with its proper north light and good working conditions. After his wife's death, when he and his widowed sister, Mrs. Joseph B. Johnson, united their households, he began to concentrate his work in New York, and to relax during the winter, when they came to their South County Road apartment. On their return this year, he brought with him his two latest paintings, only recently completed, and reproduced for the first time on these pages.

These two oils are in the finest tradition of the type of religious paintings, which are indelibly associated with the C. Bosseron Chambers name. They are lineal descendants of "Light of the World," reputed to be the most reproduced painting of modern times.

When he was a very young and struggling artist, Mr. Chambers tottered on the brink of parting with the original masterpiece for $150. Between the years of 1931 and 1941 alone it brought him in $90,000 in royalties. During the depression, a printing firm was saved from going bankrupt by this picture alone. The task of turning out orders for reproductions kept three presses rolling steadily.

"Light of the World" had its beginning in a painting,

"MY LADY OF THE ROSARY," NEXT TO THE LATEST PAINTING BY MR. CHAMBERS, AND AN OUTSTANDING EXAMPLE OF THE STYLE AND TECHNIQUE FOR WHICH HIS PAINTINGS ARE FAMOUS.

LLC BRIAN

"St. Joseph and Child" Mr. Chambers did years ago for the St. Ignatius Church in Chicago. The Italian model who posed for St. Joseph and brought his son to pose for the Christ Child refused to take any money for the honor of impersonating St. Joseph. Later the artist repainted the child's head, had the picture for sale in a shop in New York. As the Christmas season approached and he needed money badly, he wanted $1,000 for the painting, hesitated, when the dealer insisted $300 with a 50-50 division was all he could expect. Then Mr. Chambers had the inspiration of offering the painting for reproduction as a print.

The rest is history. Though in succeeding years his paintings have been sold wide-spread as prints, none has touched the perennial popularity of "Light of the World." His first well-known work was "The Return," picture of a soldier at the foot of a crucifix, painted in 1918 at the end of World War I.

Numberless versions of the Madonna and Child and other religious subjects have followed. The two latest are "The Introduction" and "Our Lady of the Rosary." In both the colors are clear, rich and lovely, the faces young, modern, yet ageless. "The Introduction" shows St. Joseph presenting a child to the Virgin Mary and the Christ Child. "Our Lady of the Rosary" is a Madonna with rosary.

This painting was recently the subject of a tribute by Monsignor J. P. O'Mahoney at Mass at St. Edward's Church.

The latest Chambers portrait was one of W. C. Coleman, well-known industrialist of Wichita, Kans., whom Mr. Chambers says he saw and painted as a "man of ideals." Another portrait he recalls doing with much pleasure was that of the father of Pietro Yon, organist at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

In addition to his art, Mr. Chambers' special hobby is collection of Chinese art. He holds no love for so-called modern art, and says he has not attended an exhibition in years.

Saint Augustine

IT'S TYPICAL OF ST. AUGUSTINE to treat its most famous and interesting people in an almost off-hand manner. The late great writer, Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings, a beloved St. Augustinian, was respected . . . and so was her privacy. The same goes for the other writers, the rich and the royal.

The town's attitude may be due to long association with "names," or simply to old-fashioned reserve, or both. But it exists, so being a creative artist here is relaxed and pleasant; and one by-product of this happy situation is that when such people are interviewed at home, there is warm and frank and very human response.

One such home is that of the Langston Moffetts, in the town's beautiful old bayfront section; a home which reflects a life-time of casual Moffett residence on two continents and a family of busy, creative people. Above the grand piano, on which Mrs. Moffett accompanies her own songs, hangs one of Mr. Moffett's original paintings. Shelves are lined with the books written by several generations of Moffetts; a careless box holds pieces of daughter-in-law Luisa's unique ceramic jewelry.

The Moffett family has just recently returned from a long stay in Italy, where Langston Moffett still lingers to finish his latest book. About the time Lippincott's published his popular novel "Devil By the Tail," he took up painting; and in the typical Moffett manner, promptly sold one of his oils for permanent exhibit in the Whitney Museum.

Miss Virginia Atter donated her charm and talent as narrator for the Junior Service League "Street Scene" extravaganza of fashions at the Hotel Ponce de Leon on February 19, for the benefit of Junior House children's home and Sunnyside home for the aged and other charities. Miss Atter, now appearing in Jacksonville, has been the featured singer at the Waldorf Starlight Roof and other New York spots. Her beautiful voice is particularly popular in music-loving St. Augustine, where she frequently fills engagements at the St. Augustine Country Club.

It was while in Paris, working on the Paris Herald, that he and Miss Claudia Read became engaged. She was studying voice, right after her Washington debut; he was on his way to Libya on an expedition in search of Cleopatra's emerald mines, and still collaborating in part with his father, Cleveland Moffett, famed playwright, mystery writer, and author of books for boys.

So family-life together, started in Europe, continues to periodically take the clan abroad, and still they aren't completely gathered after their latest long sojourn in Italy and other countries.

While studying at Perugia University for Foreign Students, their son, Cleveland Langston Moffett, met Miss Luisa Gelmetti (daughter of Italian air force General and Signora Umberto Gelmetti) who was studying law at Perugia University. They were married in 1953, now live in New York—and here the senior Mrs. Moffett really likes to tell the visitor about her family.

The lovely Luisa is slightly fabulous in her own right.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hertlein Runk and their children Christopher, Mary Page and Arthur, Jr. Formerly of New York City and Westchester, the Runks are now residents of St. Augustine, where they live at the beach.

These are the Sub-Junior Service League officers, and sponsors, photographed at their recent dinner-installation. Seated are Secretary Caroline Pfaff and President Patricia Doyle. Next is Mrs. Roy Otis Barnes, president of the Service League, and Mrs. John Daly, League sponsor; next is Mary Margaret McCarter, vice president of the teen-agers, and Patricia Grissom. Standing are Anita Anderson, Kaye Johnson, Jacquelyn Lopez, Matilda Bennett and Sybil Mathis; and Carol Stewart, the treasurer. This young group includes several daughters of Junior Service Leaguers, learns community responsibility early, in preparation for later years of service as St. Augustine wives and mothers.

As relaxation from her law studies, she took up ceramics in Italy, soon was selling her jewelry to Italian shops. Undismayed by her family's smiles, she had the jewelry shown in fashion shows in Florence, soon had U.S. buyers ordering. Today her costume pieces, which she makes in her New York studio, are sold by Neiman Marcus, Marshall Field, and smart Fifth Avenue shops. A couple of months after she arrived in the U. S., the jewelry was featured by Harper's Bazaar, will be shown in national magazines this Spring. The pieces are gorgeously colored, have the charm of hand-craft, and no two are alike.

The young Cleveland Moffett is coming right up in the world of arts and letters, too. He is with a construction firm in New York, writes in his free time. Some of his works have been printed in the highly-selective "Botteghe Oscure," published in Rome by Princess Marguerite Chapin Caetani.

And just to give proper balance to the family, the youngest member takes to the sciences. David Read Moffett, educated in Italy and Switzerland, passed his entrance exams to M.I.T. at fifteen, entered at sixteen, is studying there now.

There are cocktail parties, and — there are cocktail parties! But few in recent memory compare with the one given at the Hotel Ponce de Leon for the board of directors of Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corporation by vice-president and general manager of the aircraft division, Mr. Willard L. Landers, and Mrs. Landers.

Members of the board were Mr. James A. Allis of Upper Montclair, New Jersey, chairman of the board; Mr. Richard S. Boutelle, president of Fairchild, and Mrs. Boutelle of Hagerstown, Maryland; Mr. Arthur F. Flood, executive vice-president, from Hagerstown; Admiral and Mrs. John H. Towers, New York; former Maryland Governor William Preston Lane, Jr., and Mrs. Lane, of Hagerstown; Mr. Grover Loening, New York; Mr. Frank R. Nichols, Davenport, Iowa; Mr. Charles H. Colvin from East Orange; Mr. Earnshaw Cook, Baltimore, and Mr. E. Ainsworth Eyre of New York. Board member Mr. Sherman M. Fairchild, founder of the company, was detained in New York.

From the receiving line in the outer rotunda, guests went into the ballroom, where the buffet tables displayed ice-carvings of aircraft and other aerial symbols, placed among huge arrangements of flowers and foliage, and candelabra of shimmering light.

Mrs. Cleveland Langston Moffett, photographed in Florence, Italy, is becoming widely known as a designer of jewelry. The former Miss Luisa Gelmetti, daughter of a general in the Italian Air Force, she is married to a member of a prominent St. Augustine family, now lives in New York, where Mr. Moffett is in business.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Booker of Jacksonville relax on the lawn of the Hotel Ponce de Leon. Mr. Booker, a director of television associated with CBS, spent several days in St. Augustine recently for the filming of the TV series "Weekend in St. Augustine," under the sponsorship of the Aviles Street Guild.

After the party, board members went to Ponte Vedra to attend a monthly meeting; later several went on to be houseguests of Mr. and Mrs. Boutelle at their Winter home in Venice, Florida.

The Fairchild contingent in St. Augustine continues to grow; permanent settlers Mr. and Mrs. William Lawrence Smith returned recently from an extended business trip to California, will soon move into their new home.

The north or south-bound motorist, passing through the Oldest Town on U. S. 1, might wonder, and rightly, where the 15,000-odd residents live. Surely this tiny town just can't hold that many people, he thinks.

But to the north and particularly to the island on the east, the town continues to spread out. This is no boom-type development, however; the growth is gradual, but steady, and in the past five years scores of new homes have sprung up, concealed by the wooded land of Davis Shores and Anastasia Island.

A typical young family is that of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hertlein Runk, formerly of New York and Westchester, who have been living at St. Augustine Beach for the past five years, where Mr. Runk is in business. The son of the late Arthur Herman Runk and Mrs. Runk of New York, he was a childhood member of the Knickerbocker Grays, graduated from Princeton, served as a lieutenant in the Navy, and has played championship hockey and tennis. He is a member of New York's Princeton Club and the Jacksonville alumni association, actively attends the meetings at the Florida Yacht Club.

Mrs. Runk, the former Miss Mary Page, is a "navy junior," and as the daughter of Commander and Mrs. Jack M. Page of Los Gatos, California, was educated in schools in this country and Honolulu. She is a talented amateur ballet dancer, flies an airplane, and takes an active part in town projects, particularly those concerned with children. As chairman of the Junior Service League Thrift Shop, Mrs. Runk helped set an enviable record for sales. The very substantial funds from this project go toward the benefit of homeless tots, also make available to the less affluent good clothing and household articles at tiny prices.

Mary Page Runk, "almost eight," is following her mother's interest in ballet, and with her brother, Arthur, Jr., who is five, finds swimming a favorite pastime. Christopher, at two, as yet shows no decided talents or inclinations.

The idea of community life is planted early with the St. Augustine younger set, — for example, the teen-age group known as the Sub-Junior Service League, fits its charitable work to the older group's, includes several daughters of League members, has a member of the League as its sponsor.

Learning young to help the less fortunate, the Sub-Juniors each year take care of a "big" present for Junior House; prepare and give holiday baskets to the needy, take on painting and other chores for the annual fashion show, generally learn how to do their share of good works.

Among the members are the Misses Gail Ady, Barbara Foreman, Susannah Howatt, Susan Lopez, Ann Masters, Shirley Masters, Dian Orr, Nancy Pellicer, Dorothy Preble, Barbara Paulson, Carol Rogero, Kathleen Russell, Celeste Solano, Barbara Taylor, Nancy Willett, Cecile Wiles and Shirley Neighbors.

Also, these newly initiated members: the Misses Sara Beth Tebault, Sally Hyde, Mary Coxe, Judy Bennett, Mildred Colee, Patricia Clemmons, Paula Bussom and Angelo Militello.

The girls whose mothers are members of the Junior Service League are Caroline, daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Julian F. Pfaff, Judge and Mrs. Charles C. Mathis' daughter, Mary; and Sara Beth, daughter of St. Augustine Record publisher and Mrs. Alfred Hugh Tebault.

Design for Living: Florida Fashion

TROPICAL GEORGIAN

LAND OF VARIED ARCHITECTURAL TRENDS, Florida has proved a popular spot for developing the new and adapting the old. Nowhere, probably, do climate and vegetation play a more important part in planning homes than in the comparatively new land of South Florida. Newcomers still outnumber the native born, and many bring with them a love for the charm of homes they left behind them. Yet everyone wants to make the most of sun, warm breezes and natural beauty.

A perfect set-up for architectural ingenuity.

"Tropical Florida Georgian" is a handy term sometimes used to describe an interesting form of the perennially popular Georgian type of design adapted to the needs of tropical living and found in several residences in this part of the world designed by Mr. Frederick G. Seelmann, Palm Beach architect.

Through an interesting type of unique chain reaction, much of the same underlying motif may be found in four highly individual Seelmann-planned houses in South Florida, two already built and occupied, two still in the blue print stage.

This unusual saga of the four houses stems from the LaGorce Island home of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Jones, of Chicago. They didn't build it originally but chose it because they fell in love with this charming one story residence, more strongly Colonial than Georgian, but leaning towards the latter.

Two years ago, when Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Dale Shaffer

INDIAN CREEK FAÇADE OF THE SHAFFER HOUSE, WITH THE GARAGE AT THE FAR LEFT, TOPPED BY PLAYROOM.

of Detroit decided to build on LaGorce Island, (Miami Beach) they liked the Jones house so well they chose the same architect. The resulting home, many pictures of which are shown on these pages, emerged as strictly Tropical Florida Georgian. This house in turn captured the fancy of Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Moultnane. Plans for a Georgian type house to be erected in Fort Lauderdale are now in the process of being drawn.

Through some quirk of fate, Mr. Homer Smith of Palm Beach was to find the house that most captured his fancy in Miami Beach, only to discover the architect was from his own home town. The house was the Joneses' LaGorce residence. In the near future, work will begin on the Smiths' new residence on Via Palma, plans having recently been completed. It will be a one-story, red brick structure with the Colonial blended with the Georgian.

The manner in which provision for both year-around indoor and outdoor living has been made in planning these homes is highlighted in the designs for the two structures already built. In both the Jones and Shaffer homes, the water front terrace, loggia and living room may be thrown together or turned into separate units by means of sliding aluminum glass doors.

In the Shaffer house, the living room is separated from the loggia by five such glass panels, five feet wide, while the loggia in turn has four glass doors the same width leading to the covered terrace that faces Indian Creek.

The facade of the house is impressively Georgian, fashioned by hand-made Virginia brick, trimmed in white painted cypress with all exterior metal work in aluminum, even to the handsome Georgian entrance doorway, made of wrought aluminum. A curved, white columned portico marks the entrance.

The spacious entrance hall is the setting for the handsome wrought iron circular stair. A special personal note is found in the trophy niches that flank the dining room door that leads from the hallway. Large bay windows from the dining-room on one side of the loggia and the den on the other provide a beautiful view of the gardens and Indian Creek.

The wide, spacious living area of the house, with its combination of living room, loggia and terrace forms a focal point of interest and divides the lower floor into two separate sections, one with the den and two children's bedrooms, the other with the stair hall, dining room and the kitchen and service wing.

An interesting and unusual feature of the second floor is the picture gallery located on the second floor over the entry. Also on the second floor are the master bedroom suite, guest room, together with utility room and two servants bedrooms over the kitchen wing.

The garage is located at an angle from the house and in no way impedes the view. Over the garage, space has Frederick G. Seelmann, a native New Yorker and a Palm Beach resident since 1925, has the unusual distinction of now being a "Kentucky Colonel." This appointment, made Jan. 21 of this year, came to him through the interest of friends in Bowling Green in his architectural achievements and activity in civic affairs. Mr. Seelmann began his Florida professional career as a partner of the firm of Treanor and Fatio. He recently was cited for having one of three distinctive design awards for parochial schools in a competition for plans for the St. Francis of Assisi Parochial School of Riviera Beach. He is former president of the Florida Association of Architects. Jeff Powell is associated with Mr. Seelmann and assisted him in a number of the drawings.

In the den a large photo mural of "Bolea," a famous race horse owned by the Shaffer family, provides the motif for the decoration. The mural tops the bar, which is panelled in cypress in such a manner that the bar can be closed off from the den side.

The house is fully air conditioned and heated, to make year-around living enjoyable.

The Jones house, of red cement brick with white trim, has three master bedrooms and baths, large living room, loggia and terrace, with the same type of glass paneling that features the Shaffer residence. Its dining room gives off the entrance foyer with the kitchen and service quarters at one side.

Ponte Vedra

AT SEEMS FITTING that men of serious enterprise should have a little sunshine served with their forums, and Ponte Vedra has recently welcomed many men of distinction who are combining business with pleasure.

A regional conference of the fourteen southern branches of The English Speaking Union convened at The Inn, bringing to this resort Sir Roger Makins, British Ambassador to The United States, and charming Lady Makins. Sir Roger and Lady Makins, with the Ambassador's Aide, Mr. John Carter, arrived by Royal Air Force bomber to attend the final session of the meeting. National President of the ESU, Mr. William V. Griffin of New York City, presided, aided by Executive Assistant Mr. Roger Hawthorne.

The luncheon meeting for one hundred guests was held in the Mural Room of The Inn and Mr. Warren F. Wattles, prominent Jacksonville attorney, opened the assembly. Others at the Speakers Table were Sir Roger and Lady Makins, Admiral John H. Perry, who is in command of the Naval Air Station, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Edwards, Commodore Griffin, Bishop Juhan and Mr. James Stockton of Jacksonville, and Mr. Hawthorne.

In a stirring and well lauded speech, Sir Roger called on all branches of English speaking people to aim for a stronger mutual understanding, stressing the need for a new and dynamic approach to today's fast-paced life, since "our methods now need continual review and adaptation." An election of officers followed, and Mr. H. Plant Osborne was elected President of the Jacksonville branch, with Mr. James R. Stockton to act as First Vice President, Mr. Fontaine Le-Master, Second Vice President, and Mr. Fred B. Mohle Secretary.

This gathering was followed by the Fifth Southern Industrial Conference, in which leading men from all fields of Southern business met to confer on Southern economics.

Among the many prominent men and this is to name but a random few, were Mr. G. Keith Funston, president of the New York Stock Exchange, Mr. H. C. Smith, president First National Bank of Atlanta, and Mr. R. M. Watt, president of Kentucky Utilities Company, Lexington, Ky. These gentlemen were accompanied by their wives, who spent the days sightseeing, antiquing in nearby St. Augustine, or relaxing in the sun. Mr. E. A. Hammesfahr acted as Conference director, and Mr. Martin Gainsbrugh was chief economist of the Conference Board Staff.

Also sojourning at The Inn were members of The Fairchild Aircraft Corporation Board of Directors. These gentlemen and their wives enjoyed Ponte Vedra while here to inspect the new factory in process of being constructed near the St. Augustine Municipal Airport. They were honored by several large parties during the week.

The cry in Ponte Vedra today is for land, not gold! Available acreage in no way suffices to meet the demands of would-be residents, and "do you know of a house?" is the plea from far and wide. Among those fortunate enough to have sought and found a site are Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Pearce, formerly of Jacksonville, who have just moved into their beautiful new residence on the Lagoon. Constructed around a large patio, the house commands a view of The Inn and famous ninth hole of the golf course. The house was formally warmed recently with a large party for approximately two hundred guests.

long been popular winter visitors to Ponte Vedra, delighted the colony by purchasing the beautiful Quinlan residence on the oceanfront. Mr. Patterson is president of the First National Bank of Akron and will make Ponte Vedra his home only during the winter months.

Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Girton have also finished their new home on the Lagoon, and Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Stellman are in process of building.

The beautiful ocean front residence of Charles Hoffman was recently purchased by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Craig, of Nashville, Tenn., who will use it for a vacation retreat, and Christ Church has announced that a Parish House and Rectory are in building, and should be completed in early spring for the use of Reverend Alexander D. Juhan.

The Bath Club recently posted some very old and tattered photographs taken when Ponte Vedra was just being built, and the "lazy lagoon" dredged in its meandering course. It was certainly amazing to think in terms of then and now with this busy, thriving resort community.

Childhood dreams come true—Since Mrs. H. B. Winger (Arlene) was a child her ambition was to sing. Her ambition was granted when she won a scholarship at Baldwin-Wallace College, Berea, Ohio, and was graduated with a Bachelor of Music degree in 1947. The following Summer she attended the Berkshire Music Center at Lenox, Mass., and from there went on to the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston. While in Boston she was secretary to and also pupil of Boris Goldovsky. Her voice teacher at the conservatory was Mme. Marie Sundelius, former Metropolitan Opera Star. She married an Air Force officer and they now have two sons—Larry 4 and Dougie 2. Being married to an Air Force officer hasn't hindered Arlene's musical activities. During the Airlift days at Rhein Main, Germany, Mrs. Winger directed the Protestant Chapel Choir and also appeared as soloist with the Frankfurt Symphony while in that country. In Tacoma, Washington, she produced and directed five performances of "Hansel & Gretel" and appeared on a Ladies Musical Society concert. At Springfield, Mass., Arlene found time to direct several religious concerts and appeared with the Westover Players in a performance of "Good News." Since coming to Palm Beach, Mrs. Winger has been singing as soloist at the Memorial Presbyterian Church and soprano in the quartet at Temple Israel. Mrs. Winger was one of the soprano soloists for the "Messiah" presented by the Palm Beach Oratorio Society and gave a recital of songs at the PBAFB Officers' Wives Club. She is currently working on stage directions for the "Sweet Adeline" show to be given at The Colonades on March 19.

Mrs. James Lafferty (Mort) hails from Manhasset, Long Island and resides with her Air Force Officer husband and three children in West Palm Beach. Golf was intriguing to Mort at the early age of 12. After two years of practice she won her first club championship. Breaking 80 at 15 was quite a feat, climaxed by winning the Metropolitan Junior Championship that same year. When you're in the Air Force you move from station to station periodically and in 1948 and 1949 Mrs. Lafferty was in Pennsylvania and was the low sectional qualifier from the Pittsburgh district for the National Amateur Championship held that year at the Merion Country Club in Philadelphia. Their next station was Westover, Mass., where Mort set two course records in Holyoke and Ludlow. This year Mort won the West Palm Beach Women's Championship at West Palm Beach Country Club. She also played in the Everglades Invitation Two-Ball Foursome Championship with Mr. W. B. Merry, West Palm Beach Men's Club champion, as her partner.

BRITISH ASTON-MARTIN - AUSTIN HEALEYS
AND JAGUARS COMMENCE 12 HOUR RACE
AT SEBRING TO BATTLE WITH THE FASTEST
OF THE WORLD'S SPORTS CARS.

SPORTS CAR RACING in the person of Briggs S. Cunningham and his West Palm Beach built internationally known racing cars, will bring that East Coast city a share of the national spotlight when the Grand Prix of Endurance gets underway at Sebring, Florida, March 13.

Almost all of the 80 berths in the starting line-up have been filled. The contestants were selected from a record 120 applications. The remainder will form a reserve pool. The few remaining vacancies, will be filled from expected foreign invitational entries, late applicants and the extra 60 applications now on hand.

Designer, builder and driver, Briggs hopes to complete his new C-6R competition car in time for the 12-hour classic. The Prix is the only event of its kind in North America to count in the awarding of points by the Federational Internationale de l'Automobile in determining the World Sports Car Championship.

The millionaire Palm Beachite expects to personally drive the car.

In the works for more than a year, the C-6R will be making its first public appearance in competition at Sebring. The speedster is lighter, smaller and Cunningham hopes, faster than its predecessors, the C-4R and the C-5R.

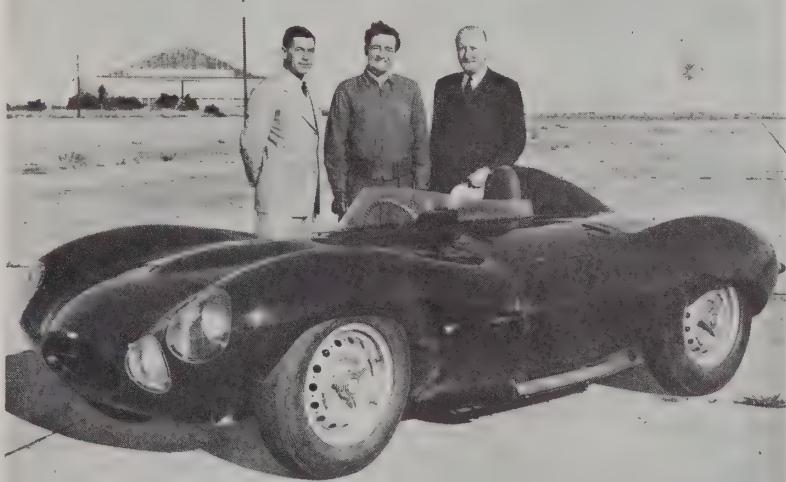

The chassis is of tubular steel with a geodetic type frame. Special gear boxes, embodying four-speed syncromesh, and a motor reported to be a Ferrari, may make the Cunningham entry one of the most formidable in the Prix lineup.

A second Cunningham entry, driven by Phil Walters, also a Palm Beachite and the general manager of the sports car plant, is a D-Type Jaguar. The director-driver is recognized as one of America's ace sports car pilots. In 1953, Phil and John Fitch drove the C-4R to victory. Last year, an Osca owned by the socialite-builder and driven by his nephew, Bill Lloyd and Stirling Moss, was first to get the checkered flag.

Should either one of the Cunningham entries cop the lead in the Prix, it will be three in a row for the Cunningham line.

The contestants face a wicked lineup. The most famous drivers of the Eastern and Western Hemispheres will be contending for the lead. With Italy's Ferrari holding an eight point advantage toward the championship—the famous car won the 1,000 k.m. race at Buenos Aires, Argentina, January 23—the going is expected to be rough.

"Gentleman" Jim Kimberly, one of sports car racing's most glamorous personalities will race a 4.9 litre Ferrari. Spelling the 47-year-old Chicagoan at the wheel will be Ed Lunken, a close friend.

Palm Beach sportsman Briggs Cunningham (center), Ford Heacock (left), general race chairman, and William Lyons of Coventry, England, founder and managing director of the Jaguar Works, look over the new D-type Jaguar which will make its debut here March 13 during the Florida International Grand Prix of Endurance at Sebring.

The Kimberly colors are firechief red. The sportsman, his relief drivers and racing crew always are dressed in red silk coveralls and the cars are finished in brightest red.

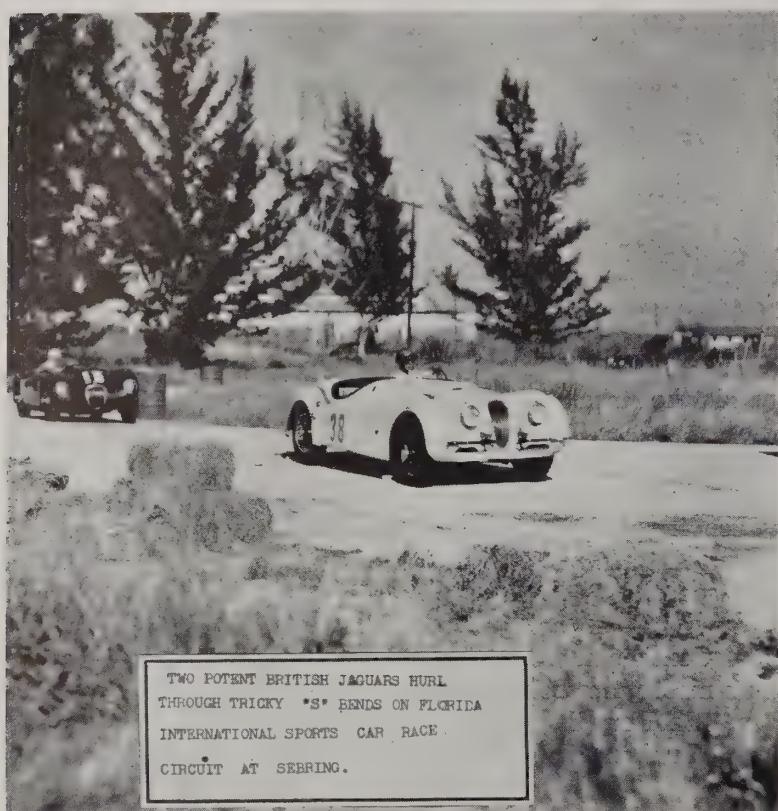

Moss, on his own this year, will drive a works-entry Austin-Healey. Alternating the London act at the wheel will be England's Lance Macklin. The car is one of the famous 100-S models, the suffix indicating Sebring. Though Moss is now the British four-star champion and an official driver for Mercedes-Benz, he consented to wheel the Healey.

Colorful Erwin Goldschmidt, New York's potent sportsman, will again race his 4.9 Ferrari. The car recently took top honors in the Pan American Mexican road race.

Harry Schell, France's ace driver, will race a Brook-Stevens Excalibur special.

Rene Dreyfus, the most famous of French drivers, will pilot a two-litre Arnoldt-Bristol.

Jackie Cooper, movie-television-stage-radio personality and budding sports car celebrity, will be at the wheel of a Healey 100-S. The film star will face his first major test in the 5.2 mile grind. Roy Jackson-Moore of England will spell Cooper.

Extremely hazardous, the Grand Prix racing route incorporates 12-right angle turns. A number of fast bends and flat corners add to the challenge. Surfaces are macadam topped.

The LeMans type start will be used to send the field on its way. The drivers take up positions on the far side of the course facing their cars. When the starter drops the green flag, each driver moves to his car, opens the door, enters, fastens his safety belt, closes the door, starts the engine and begins to race.

More than 1,000 miles will face the sportsman in the 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. grind. The cars will make a total of 2,000 slow downs. Speeds will range in excess of 150 miles an hour and speedometers may drop as low as 40 m.p.h. at the sharp, flat corner turns.

Strict regulations govern the race. Cars will be permitted to refuel only at intervals of 20 laps or 104 miles. The closed circuit course offers no facilities for major repairs. Adjustments will be limited to the type that might reasonably be effected in a gas station.

The ever capable and genial Bill Spear of Palm Beach test runs the new D-type Jaguar over the Sebring course recently. The car will be seen for the first time in competition in this country during the 12-hour grind. Phil Walters of West Palm Beach will drive the car. Spear is scheduled to pilot a Maserati in the Sebring classic.

The racing cars will be powered by engines varying from 350 cubic centimeters displacement to 8,000 c.c. The overall winner is the car which travels the greatest distance regardless of its size or potential. Each car still running at the end of the day is logged and its position is charted.

Four basic categories of trophy awards also are given for cars finishing. Three awards are for cars with the best coefficient of performance based on handicaps, three for completing the race covering the greatest distance regardless of class, three for cars completing the race covering the greatest distance according to class, and one award for cars in the new "Series produced sports cars" covering the greatest distance according to class.

The Grand Prix is held under the auspices of the Sebring Fireman, Inc., Ford W. Heacock is general race chairman, Frank Bryant deputy chairman and W. W. Harshman, treasurer.

The actual racing will be conducted by the American Automobile Association contest board.

Gentleman Jim Kimberly takes the wheel of his Ferrari, which he will drive in the Sebring Grand Prix March 13. The foreign made auto will carry the famous Kimberly color—a flaming red.

Fashion's Sophisticated Simplicity in Palm Beach

Palm Beach mid-winter fashions, bearing their distinctive mark of sophisticated simplicity, were headlined in a recent issue of Town and Country Magazine, from which the pictures shown here were reproduced.

In this issue, devoted largely to Florida's Southern Resort Section, Town and Country spotlighted Palm Beach and its nearby communities, such as Hobe Sound, reflecting the charm and informality that prevails in the modern homes, the type of life and the favored fashions even in an area labeled "The Gold Coast."

A number of Palm Beach's attractive young women are shown wearing styles by several of the country's leading designers that are high style in mid-winter and may well set the pace for next Summer's Northern resorts.

Mrs. Robert E. Bissett, relaxing on the lawn at La Coquille, wears a two-toned linen frock, in which color and design are skillfully blended.

Mrs. William E. Benjamin, 2d, posing on an upper deck overlooking the pool at La Coquille wears a costume in which tomato-colored silk and herringbone wool are combined in unusual fashion.

Mrs. Edwin Brown Davis, happy at being in Florida once more after a Boston winter last year, strolls along the Lake Drive at a brisk pace to keep up with her two young cyclists, Eliza and Henry or Hank as he's better known. Mrs. Davis' denim jumper with its detachable bib front, repeats the tone of the shirt in soft shaded stripes.

Mrs. Persifor Frazer, 4th poses on the grounds of Half Past Heaven, the Frazer Delray Beach residence, in a tucked cotton frock, topped by a cable-stitched hand-knit sweater.

Brunette Mrs. Patricia Massie Tevander wears a skirt of moyashel Irish linen with a matchstick print blouse.

For a cool morning stroll through one of the patios off Worth Avenue Mrs. Carley Rhodes is photographed wearing a cashmere coat.

Mrs. Harold M. Van Husan steps from her car at the Colony wearing a moyashel Irish linen dress with jacket from Christian Dior's New York collection.

The Whitehall

THE MID-SEASON finds Whitehall entertaining a gay crowd of resort visitors. A focal point for activity is the Sun and Surf Club which has been completely re-decorated inside and out. Aero-cars ply to and from the club for the guests' convenience.

The cabanas at the Sun and Surf are on the oceanfront and have their own balconies for sun-bathing. They are decorated in aqua-marine and white and equipped with dressing-rooms and showers. Another innovation there is lunch-on-dancing and viewing the tennis matches from the patio on the courts where Bob Murray is tennis pro. Thomas J. Clinton is the new manager of the club, coming from the Sherry-Frontenac and Roney-Plaza at Miami Beach.

Celebrities daily lunch there al fresco and among them recently were Mr. and Mrs. Max M. Matson of Cleveland. He established a record in life insurance sales, totalling $12,000,000 in 1954 for the Mutual company. A dinner was given at the St. Regis in his honor by the officers of the company.

At a nearby table in the patio of the Sun and Surf was Nat Holman, basketball coach at the City College of New York for 35 years, passing two weeks at Whitehall with Mrs. Holman. He is also professor of hygiene and physical education at the college and has written five textbooks on basketball.

The Rib Room, the new restaurant at Whitehall has definite appeal not only for the guests but is attracting numerous members of the cottage colony who give their dinner parties there.

Entertaining at this rendezvous during recent evenings were: In a birthday celebration, Mr. and Mrs. John E. McAuliffe, Mr. and Mrs. John Cushman and Mrs. Estelle Gold; Mr. and Mrs. Michael Jalkoff, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Sapingsly, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Daroff, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kassel, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Klorfein, Charles Weiss, Mr. and Mrs. A. Miami Enchantment

STANDING ALOOF LIKE AN IMMIGRANT IN A STRANGE LAND, Mr. and Mrs. John Moore Murrell's stately French chateau—its tall spires and crenellated walls dominating the scene of Spanish and Italian villas on Miami's bay-front Brickell Avenue—hummed with more-interesting-than-usual cocktail chatter the other day, of guests gathered from various parts of the country and nearby Nassau . . .

Greeted by the hosts, Sheelah and John, and the junior Murrells, in the formal reception hall with its marble stairway winding up into a "tower" — we were totally unprepared for the next gracious lady on the receiving line . . . Mrs. John Stockton ("Ducky") Ernest, Sheelah's mother. Despite the passage of time, her beauty practically took my breath away! And when I spontaneously told her so, we witnessed a charming revival of a lost art . . . she blushed! . . . graciously acknowledged my compliment, and proceeded to introduce us to her sister-in-law, Mrs. Finis P. Ernest, who was receiving with her. (An outstanding beauty of her era, and former student of Georgetown, "Ducky" lived in Wyoming where her father, listed as one of the 25 great men of the West, settled in Laramie, to which home the family still goes to spend a part of each year).

Opening onto a terrace, and garden that "has been kept as nearly as possible in its natural state," the spacious drawing room of the Murrells' chateau in the tropics tastefully reflects Sheelah's jaunts around the world . . . And beautifully displays her family heirlooms. (If she does as well with her paintings as she does with sculptures, we may one day see some of her own chef d'oeuvres adorning those walls).

Before the mantle on which were a pair of priceless Lowestowe vases, Hon. Gerald Johnston, Queen Elizabeth's representative in Nassau, was chatting with Judge Leonard O'Connor, of New York (Mrs. O'Connor was directing traffic to the out-door refreshment bar). Milling through the high-ceilinged rooms . . . through the gay yellow dining room a few steps up from the reception hall . . . and in the library decorated with ancient firearms and knives, ceremonial masks from Bali, Africa's Gold Coast and Hawaii (with two excellent masks done by Sheelah herself) and some fine sculptures by the late famed Belgian artist, Lampert Bemelman . . . were Mr. and Mrs. I. J. Holcomb of Indianapolis (recent donors of an observatory and planetarium to Butler University, on which occasion Charles Kettering made the dedicatory speech); Hon. J. Bernard Ferber, New York ("Jack" Ferber was four times member of the Massachusetts State Legislature . . . he wrote the State banking laws . . . was chairman of its Insurance Committee, of the West Side Tennis Club, Forest Hills); the Kenneth Keyes (realtor here); politically and socially prominent Roy Paige, and Mrs. Page; the Frank Katzentines; Mrs. Mortimer Mahoney (Baltimore); the Clarence Hands (former Judge Hand let us peek at the Latin motto for his soon-to-be party, at which he'll award a prize for the one who correctly translates it) Host John Murrell, a pioneer Miamian, who had one of the Appropriately, when aloha time came Girlie McShane sang some Hawaiian songs. The "Wedding Song," a duet, which she did with one of the members of the orchestra. And "Lovely Hula Hands" . . . with which she executed a true island-style hula. That the Greater Miami Opera Guild is topping its achievements this season with three performances each of Rossini's "Barber of Seville" and Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor," is due to 15 years of unrelenting effort on the part of its tireless director, Dr. Arturo di Filippi. "The Diamond Horseshoe of the opera here is composed of Benefactors, Life Members, Contributors and Sponsors," he told us with understandable pride.

Sitting in this season's capacity opening night audience and listening to the rich voice of Metropolitan opera star Robert Merrill, in his nicely-restrained interpretation of Figaro, the "Barber of Seville," . . . and looking at the attractive stage settings of Miami's present-day opera performances . . . it was difficult to picture the first presentation of opera here in 1939 . . . The season then consisted of only one performance. And the paucity of funds necessitated a dyed cheesecloth curtain! Arturo di Filippi took the male lead, and the "male" chorus consisted of altos!! (Arturo was a ticketseller too!) It has been a long uphill climb to the present successful opera in Miami, with big name stars of the Met . . . Not too unlike Dr. di Filippi's own struggle for personal success . . .

At 19, sailing to America from Italy (where he was born) he had to stoke coal for his passage . . . And he had to work his way from Galveston, Texas (where he landed) to New York where he hoped to attain fame. Detained in Salinas, Kansas by lack of money . . . and hunger . . . he took a job as night porter to pay his tuition at Kansas Wesleyan University. To buy meals, he scrubbed floors in the YMCA. And on Saturday he sold sewing machines and tuned pianos. But he made it to New York! . . . And to subsequent successes in opera in Germany, Italy and the United States. The serious illness that brought him here was a blessing in disguise; for his boredom with teaching, and his yearning for our city's cultural expansion led to the development of Miami's fine opera of today.

In 1946 Metropolitan singers came to Miami for the first time, as leads in "Faust." The operas presented before that with locals and lesser known performers—"La Traviata," "Carmen" and "Il Trovatore"—have all been done since with big name casts as large scale productions. In 1947-'48 the Opera Guild began to put on two operas a season. Regina Resnick, one of the first important singers engaged, did the first "Madame Butterfly" in 1949. And last season Licia Albanese sang another "Madame Butterfly" which was one of the best all 'round productions the Guild has ever staged.

Besides Robert Merrill in this season's "Barber of Seville," there are Eugene Conley (tenor) and Nicolo Mosciano (basso) in the leading male roles. With Graciela Rivera's lovely voice singing Rosina.

In April, Dr. di Filippi will reproduce the "Barber of Seville" in English as a special performance for the National Federation of Music Club's Convention to be held in Miami for the first time. (Further proof of our growth in stature in the music world!) Local singers who understudied this Winter's stars will take the leads. A recent letter received by our maestro of opera, from Ursuline College in Cleveland, invites him—"after giving much consideration to the music groups throughout the country"—to bring our local group of singers in the "Barber of Seville," to Cleveland, in October. A fine compliment . . . And he is seriously considering taking our opera on this "tour of the road."

Following the opening performance (January 29th) everyone (members of the Opera Guild, that is) went to the "Midnight Star Supper" held in a local hotel . . . Standing in line to the buffet table on which stood a harp chiseled of ice, were the Walter Olsons ("Benefactors"); Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Felix; the August Geigers; George W. Mead; Col. and Mrs. Fred B. Snite; the Albert Andreases; the Leland Hyzers (she's president of the Miami Music Club. And he is a prominent Miami attorney); the Albert Penns and many others. Baron de Hirsch Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Christiansen IV, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Wiegand, and new Life Members, the J. L. Wahls (A Life Member is one who contributes $1,000. A Benefactor goes right on contributing!)

Sitting with those ardent contributors to culture, the Arturo di Filippis (petite Mrs. di Filippi was "happy, but tired"—she works hard too, to give opera its proper place in Miami) were the Charles Moons, Mr. and Mrs. Kersten, Graciela Rivera and the Geyers from Ft. Lauderdale.

The committee responsible for the success of the "Star Supper" (and it was such a success that they danced until the wee hours) were: Mrs. Orion Mather (whose husband is a former financial editor of the Chicago Tribune); Mrs. Samuel Becker (Mr. Becker is president of the Miami Beach Federal Savings and Loan Bank); Mrs. W. L. Philbrick (when Mr. Philbrick gets you, you're in no condition to talk back); Miss Lillie Paton; Mrs. Radford Crane (who will leave shortly with her husband for a trip to California, Mexico City and Yucatan, at which later place they'll have a look-see at the Mayan ruins); Mrs. Albert Andreas (co-chairman); Mrs. J. H. Van Sciver; Mrs. Tom Raffington; and Mrs. Harrison R. Williams, chairman.

Many interesting people support the opera here. And it is my hunch—and sincere hope—that the man who has given so much of himself (to the point of sacrificing his health) that we may have the enjoyment and cultural advantage of opera, will achieve his heart's desire "to have 100 Life Members . . . More opera . . . And a season of six weeks" . . . Miami salutes you, Dr. Arturo di Filippi, for your wonderful accomplishment!

LHE RECENT ILL WINDS OF THE NORTH, to gainsay an old saw, have certainly blown good to Naples-On-The-Gulf. THE 1955 NEWS STORY ON FINE CAR PERFORMANCE

THERE'S a strong statement that needs to be made right now. This year Lincoln has been built to give you performance that cannot be approached by any other fine car on the road.

First, there is Lincoln's new Turbo-Drive—the most significant forward step in no-shift transmissions in 15 years. At last—completely smooth shifting plus instant acceleration, giving you both in combination for the first time.

The next news comes from a dramatic engineering achievement—the new, high torque Lincoln V-8 engine. Here is an efficient power plant with more than just high horsepower and high compression ratio. Teamed with the new Turbo-Drive, this new engine gives you performance that is matchless—not just at expressway speeds but in all speeds.

You move effortlessly through traffic. You pass other cars as if they weren't there. Hills are leveled. Curves are straightened. This is performance—this is action—out of the engineer's dreambook.

Won't you visit your Lincoln dealer soon? See for yourself Lincoln's dramatic new styling for 1955. Then take a Lincoln or Lincoln Capri out on the road. You'll quickly understand why it's the car for modern living—for magnificent driving!
